“ I am sad to say that I just now discovered this. I was hoping to find her online and go visit her, but I'm just a few months too late. Clell was my cousin (my daddy's sister's daughter) whom I hadn't seen since I was a little girl and she was probably in her 30s. We had gone up to Tennessee to visit my dad's side of the family for a few days. Clell gave me a bottle of perfume to remember her by and I cherished it. I have only sparse memories from that short visit so many years ago. This is silly, but I remember she had a can of Old Dutch Cleanser on the back of her toilet and it had a picture of a Dutch woman in wooden shoes running with a broom held in the air, and it said, "Chases Dirt Away!" I remembered that because I was a child and I'd never seen that before, so it captured my attention. Clell, thank you for your kindness all those years ago and I will see you again someday.
