“ Of all the people I've known in my life, when I sat across from her to talk, I felt she was listening with all of herself. Her eyes didn't wander, she didn't pause to take out her phone. She listened. She made me feel connected to her no matter what we discussed. I also felt as though what I had to say was the most important thing in the world to her, even if it was about nothing.

This is the sort of person Emily was and the sort of person she continues to inspire me to be. She was caring, loving, and a bright spot in a dark world for me. I will miss her more than these meager words can communicate.

“ She was genuinely kind and saw the best in others, so that is how I will remember her.

She had her demon and troubles, but she never let them get her down. Instead she owned her mistakes in life and didn't let them trouble her, so they never troubled us. Rather than being diminished, they enriched her. Yet, for all that maturity and self confidence, she still retained her enthusiasm and wonder. To say that is rare is a severe understatement. She was the best of us; an ideal of what we should strive to be but can never achieve, but that's OK because that is what she would have said. It's has been both an honor and privilege to have known her and be known by her.

Most importantly she believed in people even after knowing about the rest of you. She not only made you want to be a better person, but also made you believe you could actually do it. It is said that the measure of a person in life is by what is said of them in death. Then it is no coincidence that the measure of Emily is anything but positive for that is her legacy. Caring kindness that accepts all.

It is her light that gives the rest of us hope that there is actual goodness in the world. That light lives on in us now and in our memories of her. When this Thanksgiving comes, she will be what I am thankful for.

“ Emily's kindness, grace, empathy and compassion were obvious in everything she did and said. From the first moment I met her, I knew that she had a beautiful soul. My heart aches for the loss that her family and friends, and even the world, has suffered. My heart grieves for everyone that knew this wonderful young woman. I am so very sorry for your loss.
