“ As a great niece, it was a treat to hear Guest tell tales of the trips he and Joy experienced, both in the states and abroad. He was a voracious reader. He was always the boy from Shady Hill, though. Christmas dinners at Gail's or Mother's weren't complete until Guest and Joy arrived. One of his pastimes in later years was clipping humorous or thought provoking quotes from magazines or newspapers. He taped them in notebooks for reading and sharing. He had stacks of notebooks. He would mail tiny slivers of paper with handwritten sayings to Mother, Gail and me. Others in the family received them as well, I'm sure. Guest and Joy were dedicated to each other in every way. I will miss Guest.
