“ As a kid, I loved going to stay with Aunt Betty and Uncle Hoover. It's the crazy things you remember from childhood. Like, he always had those big cars you felt like riding in a boat, land yachts! Or, in the summer, how distinct his “farmers tan” was. I can still, clearly, hear his laugh and his speech pattern. They were uniquely his, to my ears, although Darren sounds a lot like him now. Probably, my most memorable encounter with Uncle Hoover, was when they still lived in the white house. I was sitting outside eating watermelon 🍉, not taking time to spit seeds. Only as he could do, he informed me that if “you swallow those seeds, you're gonna have watermelon vines growing outta your ears”. I said, so? Typical head shake, look and grin. I know, he had to be thinking “dumb kid”. Thanks for the memories and being part of my childhood. Love you, Uncle Hoover ❤️
